WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

We catch up with two 'ones to watch' and one from our graduate showcase, all of a couple of years ago, to see how their stars have risen

THE DESIGNER TO WATCH GYTHA BOUCHON

As well as running her thriving interior design practice, Gytha Bouchon (née Nuttall) joined forces with her sister, Amber Aikens (far right), to set up Nuttall Home in 2010. Their range of furniture, fabrics, wallpaper and accessories bears the hallmarks of quiet luxury: expertly made down-filled sofas, cashmere cushions and fabric-inspired wallpapers. 'Since setting up Gytha Nuttall Designs in 2000, I have always designed furniture and had the upholstery made to measure,' says

Bouchon (above), who combines her design expertise with her sister's marketing skills. 'Also, we were amazed at today's throw-away society, so we wanted to create furniture that is built to last generations,' she adds. 'Our motto is "the accumulation of small details done to perfection".' Bouchon is currently working on interiors for a house in St Tropez and a chalet in Switzerland.

THE PROMISING GRADUATE

DANIELLE STRZLECKI

It was 2008 when we identified Danielle Strzlecki as a 'graduate to watch'. She has used her talent – and a diploma from the Interior Design School – to work at United Designers and Spacetherapy on large-scale commercial projects in the Middle East. She joined Christopher Dezille's Honky design team in mid-2010, working on residential projects and developments primarily in London. 'As a designer at Honky, I work on projects from specification stages right through to the installation process,' she says. 'Attention to detail is a must, and my aim is to work more with clients to achieve the perfect space to suit their needs.' She is currently working on a residential development in London's Trafalgar Square area.

THE ECO WARRIOR RYAN KOHN

Ryan Kohn, director of interior design, build and property development company Living in Space, is a leading light in the field of sustainable home design. He fights the notion that 'eco' means 'rough and ready' through the development of slick products and clever design.

'We have recently completed the refurbishment and extension of large house in Kensington, which is like a living, breathing computer that manages itself in the most energy-efficient manner,' he says. 'Despite the intense M&E involved, the design of the interior is contemporary and elegant with clean lines and a good mix of colour.' A judge at the recent KLC Deco Debutante Award to celebrate emerging talent, Kohn takes every opportunity to spread his eco message. 'Change has to start at home,' he says.
